Some Help With

AnyDesk Free Version Time Limit: Understanding the New 5-Minute Session Policy

If you're using the unlicensed version of AnyDesk, you may have encountered a recent time limit for your sessions, which has been reported to be as short as 5 minutes. This limitation has sparked confusion and frustration among users of the free version, who often expect a longer connection duration.

Recently, several users have taken to forums to discuss this adjustment and have questioned whether there have been recent changes in the free usage policy. Many users have noted that previously, connection periods could last up to 30-40 minutes, but now, some sessions may disconnect as quickly as 5 minutes. This rapid disconnection has led to speculation about a possible change in the policy.

It is important to remember that AnyDesk is designed with specific restrictions for free use. If you require longer sessions, it might be beneficial to consider subscribing to a commercial license. For those who wish to continue using the free version, a simple workaround is to start a new session once the previous one ends. We recommend staying informed about any updates to AnyDesk's policy through their official channels, as changes may be made that enhance the user experience.

We hope this information proves helpful, allowing you to make the most of your AnyDesk sessions. Thank you for your understanding!