Key Features

Key Features

Here are the main differences in terms of operation and licensing between the Performance (legacy) version of AnyDesk and the new Standard and Advanced versions. This information will help you determine the most suitable version of AnyDesk that meets your specific needs.

AnyDesk	Performance (Legacy)	Standard	Advanced
Licensing mode	Per user	Per concurrent connection	Per concurrent connection
Included users	According to needs	Up to 20	Up to 50
Concurrent connections	One included per purchased user	One included and can add up to 19	Two included and can add up to 48
Operation mode	Each licensed user can connect from their device to multiple devices through AnyDesk	Each of the maximum 20 allowed users will take turns using the available connection channels	Each of the maximum 50 allowed users will take turns using the available connection channels
What if a new support user enters the company?	You must add a new user to your license in order to use it	If you have not exceeded the 20 allowed users, you just need to create it in your my.anydesk portal. The new user will take turns using the available concurrent connections. If you exceed 20, you must upgrade to an Advanced license.	If you have not exceeded the 50 allowed users, you just need to create it in your my.anydesk portal. The new user will take turns using the available concurrent connections.
What if I need to add a new concurrent connection?	Each user has one concurrent connection included, so you basically need to add a user to your license	You can add up to 19 concurrent connections to your contract. If you need more, you must upgrade to the Advanced license.	You can acquire up to 48 additional concurrent connections.
Managed devices (Configured for password access without end user intervention)	Up to 3000	Up to 500. You can add more to your license if needed (Add-on)	Up to 1000. You can add more to your license if needed (Add-on)
