Some Help With

How to Handle AnyDesk Connection Limit Notifications: A Comprehensive Guide

Hello everyone! 👋

We want to take a moment to discuss the recent connection limit notification that some AnyDesk users have started to encounter. If you've seen a pop-up indicating that you've reached your connection limit according to your current plan, don't worry—you're in the right place!

This message serves as a reminder that you are approaching the maximum number of connections allowed by your AnyDesk license. For those unfamiliar with the specifics, your subscription may come with limitations on how many connections you can establish simultaneously. For instance, free versions often impose restrictions on the number of devices you can manage and the duration of sessions.

The good news is that incoming connections remain unaffected, so everything else will continue to function as usual. This means you can receive connections from your colleagues or clients without any issues, even if there is a limit on outgoing connections.

We sincerely appreciate your understanding and continued support of our product. If you're interested in plans that offer more flexibility or capabilities, feel free to reach out to us to discuss your options.

Stay connected and enjoy using AnyDesk!